THE PREFACE

TWO Objections have been offered against the appearance of this small Treatise in this form (which hath occasion'd this Preface:) The one, That as a Genealogist I have been too Prolix, as an Historian too short in this my Discourse. The other, That my intention being to deduce the Pedegrees of these Illustrious persons from the Male-line only; I have inverted that order, by running up an Ascent for at least six Generations in the first; and in the second, by descending Ten: The one beginning, and the other terminating, in a Female.

To

The Preface.

To the first of these I Answer ; I do not think a Genealogist (even in the strictest sense) ought so to be confined, as to be oblig'd to Register nothing but the Nativities, Days of Marriage, Issue, Times of Death, Funerals, and Place of Sepulchre, of those he intends to speak of : (as some have taught) But that he may, by a Pertinent Digression, here and there set down some one, or more Memorable Action or Acquisition of Honour, or by a short Encomium, or pithy Character, Illustrate any Deserving Person in his Descent ; provided that he do not confuse and break the texture of his Genealogical Discourse by over-long and tedious Harangues : For then he is rather to be esteem'd a Genealogical Historian rian, than a Genealogist in its strict acceptance, (such is the Learned and Elaborate Sir William Dugdale in his three Tomes of the Barronage of England ; And Mr. Sandford, (Lancaster-Herald) hath Judiciously and Truly stild his Book of the Kings of England, a Genealogical History. So likewise you have Monsieur Rosieres (in his Stemmat: Lotharingæ & Bari ducum.) And the Famous Antiquary And: du Chesne, (in his Histoire Genealogique des duces de Bourgongne, &c.) for the French. Scipio Amiratus (in his Famiglie Nobile Napolitane) for the Italians. And Johannes Orlerius (in his Genealog. Comitum Nassovi,) for the Dutch. But in case the matter treated of shall so far enlarge it self, that it exceed the rules observ'd by the afore-cited Authorities, the Title of Genealogist becomes wholly swallowed up, and is lost in that of the Historian: And the Work to be esteem'd no longer a Genealogy, or Genealogical History; but an History it self of such and such particular Persons and Things: And therefore I have on purpose avoided both these, that this little Treatise might answer its Apellation, by being no more than a Genealogy, and that properly so called; although I have made some slight excursions corresponding to the Principles before laid down; and herein I am not without President (even of those who have had the Reputation of excellent Genealogists.) For

The Preface.

*For Hieronimus Henninges, in his Theatro Genealogico, (Printed at Magdenburg in the year one thousand five hundred ninety and eight, and set out in four large Volumes) takes this course; as he hath occasion to Record the Pedegrees of the Chiefest Princes and Potentates in Christendom. The Learned Reusnerus treading the same steps, though with much more diligence and exactness (in his Basilicon Genealogici, published in the year one thousand six hundred and twelve) all along adornes his Principal Branch with some Historical Memorial: And that Ingenious Noble Florentine Antonius Albicius esteem'd his Curious Engraven Tables de Stemmat. in the year one thousand six hundred and seventeen) Deficient and Imperfect, till such time as he had added some small Remarks to his Sculptures ; so that I see little of weight in this first Objection.

To the second, what I have to say will be this : First, That whereas the present Kings of Denmark are vulgarly reported to have continued the Descent of the House of Oldenburgh from the first Institution ; I have bestowed the labour of running up the Pedegree to the Original of that Honour ; as likewise shewn by what means it came United and Descendable to the present Kings, which could not so conveniently be done by an other method ; and which I did to gratify the Curiosity of some who had a desire to be satisfied therein. And lastly, it was my choice to continue the Genealogie of the Stuarts in the first Line, 'till it Terminated in Mary Queen of Scots, and that for several Reasons.

First, That so Noble a Branch of His Majesties Predecessors should not lye dormant from the time of Alexander, the second of that Name, High Steward of Scotland, viz. from the year one thousand two hundred and sixty, until the year one thousand five hundred fifty and nine, 'till the uniting thereof in the Lord Henry Darnley by the Marriage of Mary Queen of Scots. Secondly, That the Paragraphs or Sections might in some proportion answer those of the House of Oldenburgh; which the House

House of Lenox alone could not supply. Thirdly, that at the Union of the Families a sufficient opportunity might be found to trace the Pedegree of this younger Branch to its Fountain, without much interruption or disorder. And lastly, to inform those who have been misled, or are ignorant upon what warrantable grounds this Royal Family of the Stuarts came first to be Kings of Scotland; and how the Succession hath continued from Robert the Third in an Uninterrupted Line till this day; And I Pray God may so continue 'till time shall be no more, against all Factionous Opposers whatsoever, which ought to be the repeated Prayers of every Loyal, Honest, Good and Faithful, Christian-Subject.

This Walpertus finished the Monastery begun by his Father

WIG-

WIGBERT at Wildeshusen, and lies there interred with his aforesaid Father, who was the Son of WITIKIND the Pagan, (King of ~~Saxony~~, Prince of Rugea, and Duke of Angria) by Geva his first Wife, the Daughter of Gotrick King of Denmark. This Witiking wag'd War with Charles the Great Emperour, for the space of 30 years, with various success; 'till at length, being totally overcome, and his Forces defeated, he surrendred Himself and Countreys to the Conquerour, by whose means he was likewise converted to the Christian Faith, about the year of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ 785. After which, he became wholly devoted to the Service and Interest of the Emperour, and was by him, from a King, created the first great Duke of ~~Saxony~~; in commemoration whereof, he altered the Insignia, or Arms of the Kingdom, by changing the Sable Horse, bridl'd and sadl'd, in a Field Silver, into Gules, an Horse without Equipments, Rampant Argent. OF THE MOST

Illustrious and High-born PRINCESS,

ANNE,

DENMARK, &c.

BANQUO* one of the chief Nobility in the Kingdom of Scotland, about the year of Grace one thousand; was in the time of Duncan (who began his reign in the year one thousand thirty and five, made Thane of Loquhaber,) and his Principal Receiver, or prime Steward of his Revenues; unto whose Care and Conduct duſt, together with that of Macbeth (Cousin-German to the King) the moſt weighty Affairs of the Kingdom were committed: By whoſe prudent Council and Advice, Scotland became the Envy of her Neighbours for her Tranquility and Happineſs; until ſuch time as through the Ambition of Macbeth, prompted thereto by certain Prophetick Speeches, (intimating that he ſhould be King) and ſpurr'd on by the reſtleſs deſires of his more Ambitious Wife, unfortunately became the impious Ricide himſelf, by imbrewing his hands in the Blood of his Prince, and then uſurp'd the Crown. And as Tyranny is always attended with Cruelty and diſtruſt, ſo fearing the Interreſt of Banquo might give diſturbance to his ill-gotten Diadem; commanded, that Banquo and all his Poſterity ſhould be ſlain; and the rather, for that the ſame Fore-tellers of his aſſuming the Crown, had likewiſe aſſur'd him, that altho' Banquo ſhould not be King himſelf, yet from his Loins ſhould proceed proceed a Generation of Kings to Rule the Scepter of Scotland for ever: Accordingly Banquo was most Inhumanely made away by Treachery; and none of his Posterity left to survive, except FLEANCE one of his Sons, who escaped the hands of his Fathers Murtherers, and fled into North Wales; where, after he had stay'd some time, and being a youth bred up in all the Accomplishments belonging to Greatness, he so far prevailed upon the affections of the Lady Nesta, Daughter of Griffith ap Levelin Prince of the Country, that he gain'd her to his Embraces, on whom he begat a Son that was called WALTER. Fleance being dead, this Walter continued in the Court of his Grand-Father 'till he came to mans Estate; when hearing the Usurper Macbeth was slain, and that Malcome (Surnamed Cammair the right Heir of Scotland) was Invested in the Throne, he privately conveyed himself from Wales, and came to the Court of Scotland; where where making his Lineage and Extraction known, he was not only restor'd to all the Honours and Estate of his Ancestors Thanes of Loquhaber, but preferr'd to the Stewardship of the Kingdom, about the year one thousand sixty and seven: The Name of Stuart or Steward growing from hence Hereditary to his Posterity; and from whom his present Majesty of Great Britain, and his Royal Highness James Duke of York and Albany, the Princes of Orange and the Princess of Denmark are Lineally Descended. He had likewise given him (for the signal Services performed for his King in reducing the Enemies of his Prince in Galloway and the Isles to his obedience) the Lordships of Stragis, Coil and Stuarts-land. This Walter had a Son named ALAN, who with Godfrey of Boloigne, Duke of Lorraine, and Robert Duke of Normandy, (Eldest Son of King William the Conqueror of England) went into the Holy-land, in the year one thousand ninety ninety and nine, where he behaved himself with much Valour for the recovery of Jerusalem; leaving Issue ALEXANDER his Son and Heir, who Founded the Abbey of Paseley for Monks of the Order of Saint Benedict, who likewise had a Son named Walter Stuart.

1. Walter II. High Steward of Scotland.

WALTER STUART of Doun-

He was likewise Great Seneschal, or Hereditary Lord High Steward of Scotland, or he who had the chief Charge of the Kings Revenues. He left two Sons, ALEXANDER the Eldest, who succeeded him in the Stewardship, and ROBERT, who having the Lands of Courbouton assigned him for his Appennage; and that he Married the Daughter and Heir of Robert Crux (or Cross) of Crurstone, became Lord of most ample Possessions, who going with Lewis the French King in the Expedition against the Sarazens, in the year one thousand two hundred and seventy, died in Indea. From whom the late Earls and Dukes of Lenor in Scotland and Richmond in England. the Earls of March, the Lords Darley, d'Aubigny or 'Obigny in Auvergne in France, with several other Noble Families of the

The year following he was joyned in Commission with John Commin, and recovered the Isle of Man, (then in possession of the Danes) and afterwards, with the Earl of Lenox, help'd to subdue the other Isles, where he performed the part of a most wise and experienced Souldier; who had Issue, JAMES, his eldest Son, who died young, and JOHN, who succeeded him

On the day of his Inauguration or Anointing, he was Importun'd by his Nobles to alter his Name; wherefore he was Crowned by the Name of King Robert the Third, The reason given is: For that it was observed how unfortunate the Name of John had been not only to several of the Blood-Royal of Scotland, but likewise to John King of England, and to John the French King. The first part of whose Reign was spent in composing the Domestick jarrs and differences amongst his Nobles, afterwards he wholly bent his mind to War against the English; and was himself at the head of the Army that sat down before the Castle of Roxburgh, (at that time in possession of the English) where being unhappily upon one of the Batteries, at the discharge of a great Ordnance, which fatally burst in pieces, he was therewith slain on the third day of August, in the year one thousand four hundred and sixty, in the Thirtieth year of his Age, being Interred in the Abbey of St. Cross at Edenburgh. JOHN youngest Son of King James the Second, for speaking words derogating from the Honour of his Brother James when he was King, was confined to the Castle of Craig-miller, where growing distemper'd in his mind, the King pitying his Condition, order'd him to be remov'd to the Cannons-gate in Edenburgh for Cure, where (whether through the Unskillfulness or Negligence of the Chirurgions who let him Blood? or through his own obstinacy or wilfulness?) he bled to death, in the month of December, in the year one thousand four hundred and eighty, having no Issue. MARGARET, alias MARIAN, was first Married to Thomas (Eldest Son of Robert) Boyd (who was Governour of Scotland) created Earl of Arran; he fled together with his Lady into Burgundy where he died an Exul, and was buried at Antwerp, under a Noble Tomb erected there for him by Charles Duke of Burgundy; (tho others say he died at Florence of an untimely death.) 10. James IV. King of Scotland.

JAMES STUART, eldest Son of James the third, was born on the tenth day of March, Anno Domini, One thousand four hundred seventy two, and created Duke of Rothesay; and upon the death of his Father crowned King of Scotland, on the twenty fourth day of June, Anno Domini One thousand four hundred eighty eight, by the name of James the fourth. After he had ruled the Kingdom of Scotland for the space of twenty five years, he (together with the chief of the Gentry, and flower of the Nobility of the Realm) was slain in that most unfortunate and fatal Battle of Floddenfield, on the borders of Northumberland, fought against the English, on the 9th. day of September, Anno Domini One thousand five hundred and thirteen. Yet various have been the opinions concerning the loss of this King:

King : Some will have it, That he fell in the Battle on that fatal day ; others, That he made his escape. The English say, (with greatest likelihood) That he was slain in the field ; that they found his Body (well known to several of their Officers) conveyed it to Berwick, embowelled, seared, and wrapped it in Lead, carried it to London, and from thence to the Monastery of Shein in the County of Surrey, where it was buried. And John Stow assures us, (both in his Survey of London, and his Chronicle) That after the spoil of that House, (to wit, in the time of King Edward the sixth) he saw the aforesaid Leaden Chest, and the reputed head of the said King ; the hair both of the Head and Beard being red. To this the Scotch Annalists make answer, That on the day of the fight several men of renowned Valour, resembling the King in stature and proportion, were apparelled like him, had peculiar Guards and Followers appointed them, in all appearance as the King himself, that in case the King should be killed, led, it might not be justly known to either party until after the Battle; whose fall might encourage the one, and dishearten the other; and that the person so taken by the English, was one of those mock-Kings, viz. Alexander Lord Elphinstone, the King's Favourite, who resembled him both in Face and Shape; who courageously fighting that day, and many of his Friends and Followers of the Nobility falling on each side of him, was at length himself slain; which number of Nobles, the courage and resistance of the person, and the resemblance he had of the King, gave the English occasion to believe it was himself.

A second reason they give (why the Body found by the English was not their King's) is, For that he had been accustomed to wear next to his skin an Iron Girdle of a considerable weight, (a severity imposed upon himself ever since his being in arms against his Father when he was killed at Bannocksburn) and that no such Girdle or Chain of Iron (unto which he usually every three years added more links) was found on the Corps that was carried to Berwick. They further say, That he was seen soon after the Battle between Kelloe and Dunce, and supposed to be carried to the Castle of Humes, where he was privately murdered, and for which the Lord Humes was afterwards accused, tryed in Parliament, but acquitted because there was no positive evidence that could make it appear that they had seen the King after the fight. But the more common and vulgar report was, That he was still living; who seeing the Victory incline to the Enemy, and that so many brave men perished through his own wilfulness in not declining the Encounter, (according to the advice of his Nobles) the shame thereof made him timely withdraw himself, and forsaking the Kingdom went to the Holy Land, where he spent the remaining part of his days in tears and repentance: And this they grounded upon some former resolutions he had made to visit the holy Sepulchre; but being prevented by the death of Bishop

Much like the story of Charles Duke of Burgundy; who having lost the Battle at Nancy, was never heard of more; and therefore his Subjects for many years would not believe but that he was alive, and at Jerusalem. Be it which way it will, we are certain of this, that neither the one nor the other ever afterwards appeared on the Stage of the World, to act either as Princes or private persons.
